Adam Cohen

New York-based artist Adam Cohen (b.1959) creates work alive with the gestural influences of the abstract expressionist generation. His thick, luscious strokes are applied in layers to create striations of color. Often his bright colors break through the surface by cutting back into the paint while it is wet.

Cohen studied at Philadelphia's Tyler School of Art and lived and painted in Rome for year. After many successful years as an illustrator, he returned to his first love, painting. Cohen lives and paints in the Catskills, NY. Cohen has exhibited extensively in the US, Europe and Asia, most recently in Amsterdam and Venice.
